businessstart-up

If you are thinking of starting up a new business Macleod & MacCallum can advise you on your options.

With a variety of structures available to run your business it's important to decide what is best for you. Whether it be as a sole trader, a private company limited by shares, a partnership or a limited liability partnership our solicitors can advise on the legal and practical implications of the different trading entities.

From the preparation of a company's Articles of Association to the drafting of a partnership agreement we will ensure that your business vehicle is efficient and fit for purpose.

We deal with all types of business start ups including industrial, retail, leisure, hospitality, care and licensed.

As well as advising on trading options our specialised experience of business/corporate law, property law, licensing law and employment law ensures provision of a complete and unified service.

Crucial to all business startups is the involvement of other professionals. We have close ties with accountants and we will work closely with them to ensure your business structure is as tax efficient as possible.
